

The crowd Sunday was the largest that has been seen on the local grounds for a number of years. It was hot and mucky and the people on both the grand stand and bleachers sweat and complained of the weather. It was an interesting game throughout notwithstanding the score stood at the end 4 to 3 in favor of the visitors.

Hal Chase was on the mound for the locals and he was evidently not in the best of shape. He seemed to lack the speed exhibited last season. However, good sharp fielding behind the local twirler held the visitors from making a big score.

Cabinas started in to do the pitching for the visitors and did officiate for seven innings, but the colored man who did such good work the day previous was brought in to finish the game which he did in a manner entirely satisfactory to his team mates.

Through a misunderstanding there was no official score kept of Sunday's game.

Coming Games

Game played May 26, 1912. Sioux Falls, SD