

—The ball game last Thursday between the traveling all-nations team (mostly negroes) and the Blue Earth team, proved a most interesting exhibition of the great national sport although decidedly one sided. Our home boys did not succeed in getting a man over the home plate while five pair of pants dusted that much prized piece of furniture on the part of the colored troops. We have it from no less authority than Frank St. Peter, that one of the best pitchers in the world accompanies this aggregation, and what Frank don't know about balldom—we don't.

Game played September 4, 1913. Blue Earth, MN
