McCarthy Makes Baseball Players Fit Jobs

By Norman E. Brown.

THIS man Joe McCarthy stands out more and more each week as the most interesting character the baseball season has produced.

A perusal of the Cub lineup shows clearly that McCarthy has not accomplished what he has by acquiring a group of wonder ball players. In fact, many of his men are castoffs and misfits—at least, men who failed to shine with the Cubs or other teams.

Take for instance, Mike Gonzales, the catcher. Now, the Reds, Braves, Giants, Cardinals and Dodgers labored with Miguel to make him a valuable catcher—and each and every outfit gave him up as a nonessential. Now he is catching little short of brilliant ball for the Cubs. McCarthy draws the credit for handling him properly and getting across to him the fine points of the game.

There's Jim Cooney, shortstop. You'll recall that the Cardinals decided they could weather things through without his services. The Cubs grabbed him and under McCarthy's handling he has become a star.

Cliff Heathcote, up to this year, was rated as a fair all around player, but was allowed to depart by the Cardinals five years ago. This year he is a valuable member of the Cub team—thanks to Louisville Joe.

Barney Freigau was rated as a coming infielder early in his career, but never reached his best until this season—under McCarthy. "Sparkplug" Adams, at second, has played wonderful ball under McCarthy's tutoring.

The Cub pilot took Riggs Stephenson from Indianapolis after the Cleveland Indians had decided Riggs was not a big leaguer, due to his bum arm. Stephenson is getting along quite nicely with that arm in Cubville—and hitting .350 for McCarthy.

McCarthy must be given credit, also, for starting Charlie Root, rookie pitcher, on the high road to fame in his first year in fast company. Root has been one of the outstanding pitchers of the league.

It has been mentioned before that Hack Wilson is one of the valuable members of McCarthy's outfield. Hack was turned loose by the Giants. Wilson's improvement comes partly from learning to hit curve balls.

Not a bad job of managing, considering the variety of so-so players and hopefuls. Really not.

YOUNG FISHER ONCE STOPPED JACK DELANEY

By Al Demaree.

Young Fisher, a fighter who hails from Syracuse, holds the unique distinction of being the only man who ever kayoed Jack Delaney, lightweight champion.

The pair met at Bridgeport three years ago. Fisher, who has fought them all, including O'Dowd, Greb, Berlenbach, Downey, Ratner, McTigue, Slattery, Malone, Moody, Marullo, etc., was never known as a knockout artist, but rather as a glutton for punishment. In short, he belonged to that group of fighters like Willie Meehan and Joe Grim who couldn't be licked.

Delaney was outboxing him this night and had just leaped high in the air to fling a punch, when Fisher caught him on the jaw. Delaney went down like a collapsible wagon being closed. He was out a good five minutes.

They have been rematched two or three times since, but something bobs up to call it off. Delaney was ill the last time.

Whether Jack will wipe the stain off of his record will be watched with interest.
