Conches Hoyt and Martin Uphell that Player Had One More Year to Play—Entire Backfield Had Been Built Around All-State Man.

Nicholas Kutch, Iowa all-state fullback for the past two years and captain of the Sioux City high school football team, has been ruled ineligible for further participation in high school football by the State Athletic association, according to the report received by the Sioux City coaches. The association has ruled that Kutch, who has been playing for the Cedar Rapids high school, which has been a member of the association since 1918, had played four seasons of high school football and therefore was ineligible.

Although Kutch has been a member of the Sioux City football team for the past four years, his participation has been limited to the last two years. He had not been a member of the team during his first year. Kutch was not an all-state player in his first year, but he was named to the team for the second year. He was named to the team for the third year and for the fourth year. The ruling of the association will mean that Kutch will not be able to play for the Sioux City team this season. The team has been built around Kutch and his fellow players. The coaches are now looking for a replacement for Kutch. They have had several meetings to discuss the situation. They are looking for a player who can fill Kutch's position on the team. They are also looking for a player who can lead the team as Kutch has done in the past.

The loss of Kutch will ripple severely in the Sioux City team. The date for the high school season has been fixed for the first of October. The team has only a few weeks to prepare for the season. The coaches are under a lot of pressure to find a replacement for Kutch. They are also looking for a player who can lead the team. TEE, FAIRWAY AND GREEN

A Talk on Clothes. "An army without a uniform is an army without a discipline without purpose—it is a mob. Put it in uniform and each individual member undergoes a change in mental attitude that is electric. It is, potentially, a superior. I quote an army captain of my acquaintance because what he said is in some degree true of golfers. Here's an instance: My friend, John Dille, nationally known newspaper scoutmaster who at different times has owned everything from an incurable slice to a patented barn door opener and a part interest in an elephant that wintered in the south on hay that cost $10 a ton, and who was the distinguished possessor of the first golf "attacks" that ever appeared in Dixon, Ill., 20 years ago, now, for the first time in his life, owns a pair of golf knickerbockers, imported English gardening cap and a pair of golf shoes. Mr. Dille's length, from his feet to the sky above where he leaves off, covers a stretch of 6 feet and 2 inches, so with Ambassador George Harvey, there may be some who are taller than he, but in a quote as to the game, he is not surpassed. The game has conquered, however, and my friend's rounds on the links henceforth will be made with much greater comfort and freedom of movement and I prophesy a more successful career in the game because he's dressed for the game. Remember the soldier. The surrender on Mr. Dille's part reminds me that there are thousands of golfers throughout the country who for some strange reason are unable to bring themselves to the wearing of knickerbockers. They play. Perhaps they hesitate for the reason that some players, conspicuous in resplendent checks and plaids, seem to reflect the idea that they think their golf club is a club for knickerbockers only. The player who has refrained from the knee-length garment will discover a new enjoyment in the game the first time he dons knickerbockers. I have never said so before, but I do say now that your golf will never be
