

All Nations came to play baseball in Montrose. Thursday last. A big crowd went out to see them. The All Nations team is one of the most celebrated baseball clubs in the U. S. They are sent out as a special attraction by the Schmelzer Arms Co., of Kansas City Mo. They are under the management of Wilkinson & Gaul. This team always puts up a good game with any local team that can play ball. They mostly lose out in Montrose and did this time. The crowd cheered both teams along to victory—if possible—as the All Nations are quite popular here coming once or twice every season. Luck seemed against them however, last Thursday, and the Montrose boys won, the score being 3 to 1 in their favor. A large number of autos came to see this game. They did not tarry any, however, when it was over and they disappeared almost mysteriously. The crowd seemed to enjoy this All Nations game, and it ought to considerably encourage the local team here to win over such celebrated professionals.
