

BEAT MONARCHS IN NINTH.

The Blues Overcame a 3-Run Lead and Won, 10 to 8.

It waxeth late in the season to become very enthused over a game of baseball. So it's very calm we are to chronicle yesterday's little melee between our Blues and "them" Monarchs. A ninth inning finish by the A. A. leaguers, aided and abetted by one Joe Rogin, in which five athletes ambled across the home zone, was the final straw which tickled the negro club into a 10 to 8 defeat.

When the Blues went to bat in the first of the ninth the score stared at them, 8 to 5, to favor the Monarchs. It's very glum they were, little knowing, of course, how downright generous a pitcher or so can become.

It happened thusly; Glen Wright had been walked and after Mr. Pete Scott, who assumed Pitcher Lambert's role as batter, had whiffed gloriously at a few of Kile's shoots, Berney Friberg found a hole around second base and pickled the sphere thereabout, which lodged him safely on first. Wright perched on third.

Tham Crawford sent a signal of distress to his star moundman, "Bullet" Joe Rogan; the latter took a few preliminary pitches. Then he buried a pitch in Artie Butler's anatomy. And the bases were filled.

Good and Brief took turns looking fiercely anxious to paste the ball out of the lot but "Bullet" Joe wanted there to be no question as to his generosity. So he coiled the bulb with carefree abandon and the "umps" was careful in each instance to bellow whatever was his enunciation of "ball."

Two runs were forced in by this method of procedure and Zwilling's long sacrifice fly to Donaldson sent the tying counter about. Whereupon Short-stop Lloyd allowed a hit to elude him and two more runners were in.

Oscar Horstman, whose name had a familiar ring, then sent back the negroes in their half of the ninth.

Oscar Fuhr started for the Blues and lasted long enough to account for four of the Monarch runs. Don Lambert then pitched until the ninth. "Rube"

Currie was the Monarch's starter but gave way in the eighth to Rile. The score

NOTES OF THE GAME

Rogan and Bone will oppose each other this afternoon. Bone won a close decision in last Sunday's pastime.

The series stands now two to one in favor of the Blues.

Donaldson robbed Brief of a triple when he backed up against the fence to pull down a hefty drive in an early inning.

A crowd of 2,354 was out.
