

Salem fans had the first opportunity in years to witness the famous All-Nations baseball club last Thursday, when that glistering aggregation came to town to meet the local team. In the absence of Carr, a gentlemen named Bockelman was secured to catch, and A. Eilers attempted to spitball his way to victory. Linder, one of the visitors' pitching mainstays, was on the mound, and out-pitched the local hurler, winning 7 to 1. A good sized crowd saw the game.

Game played August 10, 1922 at Salem, SD
