

The All-Nations ball game drew quite a crowd here Tuesday afternoon but seemed to be far from interesting, for the reason that people as a rule expected to see altogether too much. They were good ball players and when put to a real test some of them could "go some." The score resulted favorable to the visitors, it being two to eight. The bunch were traveling in cars and jumped from here to Yankton, South Dakota, for their next game.

Game played August 22, 1922 at Lynch, NE
