

ALL NATIONS BASE BALL CLUB
WINS GAME FROM PLAINVIEW

The All Nations base ball club, owned and managed by the famous colored player, John Donaldson, played the Plainview team on the local diamond Sunday afternoon, carrying off the honors of the day with but little trouble by a score of 9 to 0. The Plainview boys seemed to be a trifle afflicted with stage fright, which enabled the visitors to get away to an excellent start. With a couple of errors, both of omission as well as commission and a couple of close decisions going against the locals, Donaldson and his lively crew amassed a brace of four scores in the initial round. Three more were added to their string in the third inning and then the game drifted along very nicely until the final round when they made two more counters. An exceptionally large crowd was on hand to witness the game, numbering close to one thousand people. Some disappointment was expressed by a number of fans over the fact that Mr. Donaldson failed to display his repertoire in the pitcher's box as had been promised. Their ball club is a good one and can take the count from almost any aggregation of amateurs in the country. Mader, Kersenbrock and Paulson did the umpiring.
