Giants Win Sunday's Game.

It took several extra sessions to decide the contest between the Giants and Monarchs today. As predicted, the Giants showed considerable more strength today than yesterday. Braine, working for the Giants, was singularly effective. Here's your fine stalwart athlete, broad of shoulder, strong and keen-eyed, with evidently, virile brains to direct the happy physical combination. The sturdy mauler held the Monarchs down to meager as well as scattered hits for twelve long innings. It was a close game today. The playing was easily of the big time variety. The Giants scored one in the second inning and two in the third. The Monarchs failed to score until the seventh inning when they made three—it was then blankety-blank until the Giants clinched with a score in the twelfth inning, the game. The Giants hit Mendez liberally and he canned himself from the mound in favor of Currie, that arch performer, who pitched brilliant ball, but could not retrieve the fate of the Monarchs. A close decision precipitated a squabble which was soon adjusted and the game went on. The fans all voted that it was the best game of the season. There were fully ten thousand of these present. Of course the dailies said "eight thousand," but allowing two thousand for diplomatic disarrangement on their part and you are nearer the real.
