K. C. Monarchs Trim the St. Louis Giants

Six Thousand Witness Humiliation of Local Team, While Two Thousand are Turned Away

St. Louis, Mo., May 14.—The official debut of the St. Louis Giants as a league entry was staged here last Sunday when the K. C. Monarchs of Kansas City engaged the locals in the initial tilt that starts the baseball wheels to buzzing in the new circuit. The baseballists drew ideal atmospheric conditions for the contest, and this, the inaugural go, augmented by a parade extending several blocks in length and jazzed on by two or three highly spirited hands, had a tendency to drag out such a huge throng of enthusiasts that hillsides, housetops adjacent to the inclosure, trees and motor truck tops upon the outside were ushered into service so eager were the bugs to lamp the doings.

The walls that inclose the baseball arena were choked and clogged to the point where the crowd had to be turned upon the field, making ground rules necessary. The throng completely encircled the playing field, so there remained no more than ten feet of space for the outfield to romp over, and the first and third base lines were fairly teeming with masses of excited humanity, still, despite this extra handicap, the players of both teams put up a creditable showing.

Drake, a soung pitcher who flashes sparks of coming greatness, was on the slab for the Glants, while Sam Crawford, a veteran, was the heaver upon whom the Monarchs based their hopes of conquest. There was a sprinkling of youth, age and new faces in line-ups and the two teams appeared to be about evenly matched in hitting strength, fielding and general field experience. As it was, the show developed into a contest of skill between the two pitchers and honors were even up to the sixth frame, four bingles being gleaned off each delivery. However, in the second inning, with a man down for the count, Center Fielder Blackwell of the home team stung one eted for the circuit. Donaldson, p ing the center garden for the M archs, tore out for the fast sphere and with aparently no chance on earth for a catch, he stuck out one hand, thereby instituting a severe localized pain when the pellet clung to his glove for a put-out. There were no rill producing stunts on either side ntil the sixth, when with one out. ashington, the movie star from the coast, now playing first base for the Monarchs, slammed one out in field for two sacks: Donaldson followed with a two station blow to left field the movie star scoring; Carr, and a other coast celebrity, beat out a between first and second, but Drake tired the side without further scoring wford held the St. Louisians in lesh while his mates pushed another run across the plate in the seventh on base on balls, a steal and a slam for two bags: that ended the scoring far west . crowd. In the opened up for the home team drag good for two bags.

Mendez derricked Crawford and "Rube" Currie adorned the slab? he killed to but with Hill still marconed on second. ackwell came to the rescue wit to, right and the home guard scored their lone tally of the game. T tors rested upon their laurels inbut the Glants made d for the honors in their two men dead Cobb was ca in place of Holtz; he slashed one to left field and took second. rocked with merriment as Finner ca to bat for Drake. Currie beaned pinch hitter and the crowd broke loose swarmed upon the field. order was restored Currie relieved throng of much of their steam when fanned Hill, ending the game, 2-1, for the Monarchs.
